My dear Miss Sweeney:

I was sorry not to have seen you when you were here on Sunday, but I am never at the Museum on that day. As you probably discovered, we have not yet arranged the new exhibition, but we are preparing displays for both the new and the old building, and your father's medals will be included. At present they are stored in the vault, being two large heavy gold medals. We should very much like to have the other medals which have been presented to the Captain, for exhibition later on.

Yours very truly,

Curator.
